

Data Center Migration

Business Need

Most companies aren't in the business of moving data centers. However, many companies have to move their data centers, and skills are often lacking when it comes to identifying risks and strategizing mitigation plans. The opportunity for failure is extremely high.

Result

Clients will participate in Highland Partners' structured planning process, which involves applications, IT infrastructure and facilities. Clients will receive a jointly developed data center migration plan that is executable. Clients then have the option of employing Highland Partners to manage the migration or participate in it, as our experience dramatically increases the probability of migration success.

Value

Our clients' migration and business objectives are met due to careful and thorough planning and precise execution. Clients are well informed during the entire process to maintain confidence throughout execution.

OVERVIEW

Business reasons dictate the need to migrate a data center to a different facility for a variety of reasons. Typical examples include the need to centralize or consolidate, expand to a larger facility or even outsource the facility to a commercial service provider. The motivation behind the business decision is not as important as choosing the right partner to ensure migration and business objectives are successfully met.

Highland Partners understands the impact a migration can have to our clients' business operations. Likewise, we understand the important role applications mapping plays in the planning of any data center migration. Applications drive the way IT infrastructures are planned in order to have a comprehensive plan that addresses applications, infrastructure and facilities. Our clients are key contributors during the planning dialogue. After all, our clients possess the institutional knowledge that is critical to successfully meet migration and business objectives.

Our clients' information assets are the very lifeblood of their businesses. Highland Partners carefully steps our clients through our time tested and repeatable Data Center Migration Methodology. We understand all of the bumps in the road, and we ensure clients avoid them by using our proven practices and leveraging our vast experience base. Our execution process includes hour-by-hour status reporting during the migration to be sure clients understand every step of the process and the progress being made. In short, we leave no stone unturned. Clients are able to rest comfortably that their company's critical information assets are in safe hands with our experienced migration experts.
